What is a Service User Rep?

Reps are people who have learning disabilities.

Their job is to speak up for people with learning disabilities living in their area.

Reps find out what people with learning disabilities think about the services they use.

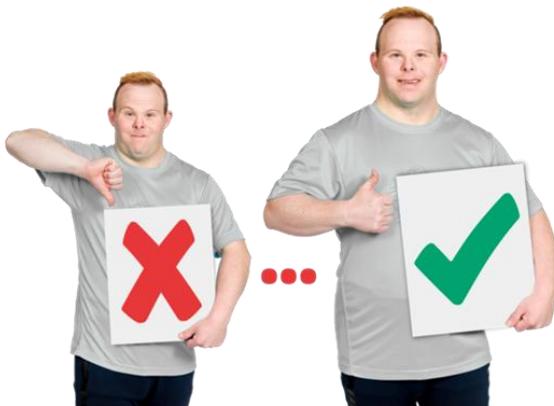

Reps go to meetings and speak up to the people who plan learning disability services.

How can reps help?

Reps can talk to other people with learning disabilities and ask if they have problems in their health or social care.

Reps can give feedback about the problems. They can tell the services how to be better.

What might reps speak up about?

Asking for Easy Read

Asking for wheelchair access

Who do the reps work with?

Council

The council

Hospitals

Universities
